Man Killed by Train He Didn't See

The railroad wigwag signal was swinging as John B. Cilveti, 81, approached the Southern Pacific crossing on Marguerita Ave., in Alhambra, Tuesday afternoon.

A train was stopped, so Cilveti started to drive across the tracks.

A freight train from the other direction plowed into his car, dragging it 175 ft. down the tracks. Cilveti, of 2200 W Hellman St., Alhambra, was dead on arrival at General Hospital.
